

Room with a view

With an abundance of light and space, this sleek, contemporary kitchen is certainly an eye-catcher

Many attest the kitchen is the hub of the home. This statement is obviously true when looking at this intriguing kitchen design by A-Plan Kitchens. Designer Catherine Young was asked to develop a contemporary kitchen that would make good use of the space and become the centre of the action. Delivering in true style, this kitchen is not only functional and aesthetically pleasing but also boasts great views to the lap pool outside. This outdoor/indoor flow-on effect really adds to the open-plan and ambience of the home.

The use of 40mm polished essa stone in Wild Truffle on the benchtops provides warmth while the contrasting white cabinetry gives a sense of space. The generous island bench is very inviting and almost beckons you to pull up a chair and enjoy a cup of coffee. The designer has cleverly created a sense of space and allowed the island bench to become an inviting centrepiece rather than an overwhelming addition. Large stainless-steel handles on the cabinetry certainly add significant appeal as do the brushed aluminium kickboards and impressive traditional dual-fuel stove in modern dark grey.
